

THIS IS US

Rainbow people experience higher rates of violence than the general population. Yet our experiences are often erased from conversations around family or intimate partner violence.

Rainbow people also often have low trust in support services due to negative experiences of both individuals and communities at large. Some support organisations have people and systems that entrench prejudice towards rainbow people.

Rainbow people experience minority stress, and this can put our relationships under pressure.

Together, we can stop violence towards rainbow people.
